

SEEK HUSBANDS FOR FRENCH GIRLS

Organization of French and American Women Committees Planned.

BY NEWTON C. PARKE.
(International News Service Staff Correspondent.)

PARIS, June 29.—The immediate organization of a committee of French women to co-operate with a similar committee in the United States with the object of promoting marriages between French girls and American youths, is urged by Prof. Paul Carnot, of the faculty of medicine of the University of Paris, in a letter to the International News Service.

Prof. Carnot confesses in the current issue of the Paris Medical that when his suggestion on "international marriage pool" was first launched in the United States through the medium of the International News Service, he had little hope for its success.

"But since my article appeared in many of the biggest newspapers in the United States I have received an avalanche of letters coming from all states and from all social classes in which young men express their desire to take French brides," he writes.

"I have therefore concluded that in this respect certainly, we have not taken into account our enormous possibilities abroad, particularly in the United States, a prestige which throws in the shade some of the depressing actions of our politicians and financiers."

"Among the letters which I have received are some from Americans who complain of their solitude and who dream of installing by their firesides a little of the grace and gaiety of the French girls. These letters I have thrown into the fire, for we do not wish to transport our precious daughters to America where they will be lost to us, where their children will be American. Furthermore, experience has shown that the French girl transplanted to a foreign soil does not make a successful wife. She grows weary in an atmosphere not her own, and that such marriages are too frequently by dissolution and divorce."

"But it is entirely different for the second category, which I believe deserve our careful attention. They come from young Americans who wish to marry French girls and come to live in France. Some of the writers even tell me their particular tastes: one wants a blonde with blue eyes, another chestnut hair and black eyes, a third insists upon a jolly girl, another wants a good musician, some tell me exactly how large she should be and certain others even give me information about their salaries."

"All these eager young men from the United States demand that I respond immediately. All agree sincerely and entirely desirable as husbands. But, alas, my laboratory here in the school of matrimony is not a matrimonial agency, and I have no time to respond to it for this reason that I suggest the creation of a committee of French women whose names would impose respect, and knowing the customs of America. We could thus come to the aid of the thousands of young French girls whose marriages, otherwise, is an arithmetical impossibility because the war has killed off so many of our young men. We could thus draw to France vigorous young men of America, full of physical moral health, who would soon become good Frenchmen. From these marriages would finally be born healthy infants, the children of French mothers, who would remain French."

"The aid of the Americans I find the Canadians equally desirable as husbands. Many of them come from French stock, many speak our language, and during the war we have admired their courage."

"We can not hope by this process to marry the two millions of French girls whose sweethearts were killed in the war, but perhaps we may save some tens of thousands and thus reduce in some measure the great disequilibrium of sexes in France. Even the prospect of this limited success should give us the impulse to energetic and immediate action."

SCRAP LITTLE OF GERMAN MATERIAL

Interallied Commission of Control Finds Difficult Task.

BY MARCEL RAY.
(Special Correspondent of the Petit Journal and the International News Service.)

BERLIN, June 29.—Scarcely one-fifth of the war material in the hands of the Germans when the armistice was signed has been destroyed, although the treaty of Versailles proscribes its immediate destruction. Gen. Nollet, head of the interallied commission of control, which has entire charge of the task of supervision of the destruction of the German war machine explained to me the difficulties surrounding the work of the commission.

"Germans," said the general, "will possess enormous quantities of war material. We have taken over thousands of guns of heavy caliber, but these remain at least five times as many as we know about, besides the hidden stores we are discovering every day. We have constructed more than a hundred centers of destruction, which are working constantly. As a matter of fact, we do not actually destroy the guns. We merely render them incapable of military use. The guns are cut into pieces and the metal is turned over to the reparations commission to be placed to Germany's credit, or it is sold to German factories as raw material."

"Holding exercising vigilance over the destruction of German armaments, the commission has another and much more important task to perform. This is the control of the effectiveness of the existing German army. This is something which concerns us not only today, but also in the future. It is the most difficult part of our task because it is constantly complicated by questions of a political order."

"The treaty of Versailles gives the Germans the right to organize police corps without weapons. The troops of the Elbewehr were organized for war purposes and were armed precisely like those of the reichswehr. If we find that the other come under the same heading we will take immediate action and force the German government to dissolve this corps also."

Gen. Nollet explained the methods by which he is carrying out the surveillance of Germany's military activities.

"The mechanism of our organization," he said, "is very simple. It consists of three sub-commissions. One has charge of German fortifications, another of armaments and the third of the effectiveness. Each of these is in charge of a general. To carry out the work of these commissions Germany has been divided into a small number of districts. In each of these districts there is a colonel with his staff and secretaries, usually from 20 to 30 persons in all. They work in conjunction with a similar German staff. If any question comes up which can not be settled on the spot by these men it is referred to the council of the commission which reaches a decision and transmits it to the German government for execution."

"The powers of the commission which it holds from the supreme council and Marshal Foch will continue until the day when every one of the military clauses of the treaty of Versailles has been executed. In full agreement with my colleagues of all the allied armies, I intend to carry out the provisions of the treaty without brutality, without useless rigor, but also without weakness."

ESTATE OF DEAD MAN
SUED FOR HEART BALM

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., June 29.—(By International News Service.)—The $25,000 claim in probate court here for the estate of Walter T. Tate, based on an alleged breach of promise to marry, will be contested by the heirs of the estate. It is announced.

On Tate's promise to marry, Miss Desmond asserts, she sold her business in New York city at a loss of $10,000. She asks an additional $15,000 because of certain alleged concessions on her part after she saw Tate received the proposal of marriage. She asks $500 to refund her railroad fare, a part of which was spent, she explains in a trip from New York to Washington, D. C., to marry Tate. His estate amounts to $20,000.

SAY ALIMONY LURE TO DIVORCE COURTS

YOUNGSTOWN, June 29.—(By International News Service.)—That alimony is the sole basis for many divorce suits is the claim made by some Youngstown residents who have given the question of divorce considerable study.

These students claim that alimony is the root of the divorce evil throughout this nation.

One Youngstown man stated he knows of three women who expect to institute divorce proceedings solely to obtain alimony and who hope to be free to spend the money without interference from their husbands.

They were brought to England by Handley-Hage aeroplanes and were said to be in excellent condition. Some of the leading fruiters are considering the establishment of a regular service of planes for the conveyance of fresh fruits from the continent to this country. It is stated that the extra cost is very small in proportion and that there will be a good market for the fruits with the fashionable hotels and the "new rich."

"Yes, sir, I was in an awful fix with my stomach all out of order and my kidneys working me a bad night and I had to be careful about what I ate, and often I was so nauseated I couldn't eat a thing on my stomach. GOLDFISH AND CRABS.
BUT NOT CHILDREN

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(By International News Service.)—Not coming under the legal status of a "harmless, live animal," such as goldfish, soft-shell crab, or young chicken, children will not be accepted for transportation as parcel post packages.

The assistant postmaster-general made this ruling based on a postal law, after one nine-year-old girl had applied to go to Louisville, Ky., from Washington, and a local mail had written to inquire if he could have a five-year-old child sent here from Shreveport, La., by parcel post.

The law specifies that "harmless live animals, which do not require food or water, such as other similar live creatures, can be sent."
